Karen Bussolini  -  Gardening with Kids: Opening Eyes and Doors

Our yards – gardens, landscaping and wild places – offer boundless opportunities for learning through all the senses, for exploration, creative daydreaming and fun. Karen Bussolini shows easy ways to engage kids and make the whole yard a discovery zone. It’s about planting experiences that connect them with the living world, making spaces that intrigue and shelter and giving them a rich environment to observe and engage with. The speaker suspects that there’s not much worth knowing that can’t be learned in the garden. So let’s entice a new generation into the delightful lifelong journey of becoming a gardener.

Karen Bussolini is a lifelong hands-on organic gardener and lover of nature. Trained as a painter and well-schooled in the art of seeing, her garden photography, talks and writing reflect the world through her artist’s eye. She photographed six books, including The Homeowner’s Complete Tree and Shrub Handbook, The Naturescaping Workbook: A Step-by-Step Guide for Bringing Nature to Your Backyard and Elegant Silvers, which she also co-authored. Karen’s photo-rich talks have people laughing and learning from coast to coast. Her email newsletter, “Eco-Friendly News, Views, Clues and How-To’s” and her garden coaching practice teach homeowners how to create healthy yards that are resilient, full of life, diversity and delight. Dear Fellow Gardeners,

We are still beaming about the results of our annual Garden Fair, held on what felt like the first real spring weekend. Thanks for your support, both for buying plants and bidding on containers but also for volunteering to make it happen. It’s an exhausting three days but exhilarating all the same, and going home with our respective cars stuffed with plants is a wonderful thing. Remember that we will be selling plants that are still available before and after our June 9 lecture.

There’s a lot going on in June for gardeners on the East End – there are many events at LongHouse, Bridge Gardens and Madoo. If you want to learn more about roses, check out the Southampton Rose Society’s June 15 Annual Rose Show. See our June calendar for details and get out to do something other than planting your own patch.

One of the best ways to be inspired and to learn about design as well as horticulture is to visit gardens, and we are working hard to offer more local garden tours this year. Pamela Harwood and Erik Brockmeyer have planned an early June tour of Bridgehampton gardens that promises to be quite special. We will also continue to list local gardens participating in the Garden Conservancy’s Open Days program.

How could it be that we are already facing the summer solstice? It’s the official beginning of summer, but also the time when our long days of sunlight start to contract. The only antidote is that of Carpe Diem – seize the day to enjoy the early dawns, long twilights and the weather that makes us want to spend as much time outside as possible.

Happy gardening,

Alicia
LOCAL GARDEN TOUR EXCLUSIVELY FOR HAH MEMBERS AND THEIR GUESTS

Bridgehampton Village

Saturday, June 8th, Starting @ 10:00 am

As three of our gardens are along nearby Church Lane, and due to parking limitations on that street, we urge all attendees to park at the HAH, and go from there with carpool or walk to the first three gardens. Sign-in begins promptly at 10am and ends at 10:30 am at the first garden, which is at 69 Church Lane. At the sign-in table you will receive directions to the next gardens.

The house at our first garden at 69 Church Lane was built in 1840 with a lovely stone foundation not hidden with plantings. However, the property has been landscaped in more recent times. We’ll view mature trees, old and new shrubs, stone steps leading to climbing hydrangeas along a wood fence, hydrangeas, and other plantings, and an incredibly designed pergola outside the pool house with stone patio and old climbing wisteria, and an expansive lawn.

The second house, only steps away, also an historic property, features statuary, expansive lawns, beech hedges proving privacy around the pool area, mature privacy trees, a tall weeping copper beech, and more.

There will be a third house on Church Lane, as well as other stops in the heart of Bridgehampton Village.

See you there, Pamela Harwood and Erik Brockmeyer

HAH Library Footnotes† June 2019
Susan Kennedy Zeller

Summer Reading is a special time for gardeners. We can kick back with a tasty drink in hand, admire our handiwork, flip open a book or magazine, give a contented sigh and burrow into reading. Remember we stay open in the HAH Library on Tuesdays and Saturdays (10 to noon) during the summer so you can pick up your favorite author or test out a new one. Hot off the press arrival books are set on the window sill for a brief time so you can easily peruse them and take one out for longer term reading.

Bulletin Board Funnies. OK…I will admit I LOVE funny, comics and cartoons. I am seeing numerous ones that pertain to the outdoors, gardens, and plants. Clip them out! We can make a “Cartoon Space” for them on our bulletin board so we can all peruse garden info whilst we tickle our funny bones! (Be certain to clip the artist/author’s name out as well).

Yard and Book Sale. Folks have asked when we would have our Yard Sale. It is NOT until the early Fall, so save those “no longer wanted but in perfect condition” garden items for us and we will notify you when to bring over. Please do NOT bring now as we have no spare spaces for yard sale or more spaces even for sale books, plus we are in throes of repairing our storage spaces! Your generosity will be double appreciated for helping us this way.
HAH GARDEN FAIR 2019

From nothing to everything in plants, we brought it all to you to buy and you did! Thank you all volunteers and patrons and plant buyers. You made a great Fair and Party and we were rewarded with a beautiful rainbow and a great many smiling faces!
